Far-Right Appropriation of Non-Territorial Autonomy: the Sudeten German Party Case

Oskar Mulej

(Austrian Academy of Sciences)

Oskar Mulej's work package investigates the far-right adaptations of non-territorial autonomy during the interwar period, closely focusing on the ethno-federalist model developed by the Sudeten German Party. It explores how German minority activists in Czechoslovakia, who were familiar with the pre-war Moravian Compromise, the Austro-Marxists' writings, as well as with the recommendations of the Congress of European Nationalities adapted an originally liberal idea to the language and needs of an illiberal, völkisch ideology.

The presentation will start with an introduction made by Börries Kuzmany.
